Western chords for Indian bhajans?

In our previous sheet music editions, we refrained from harmonising bhajans, primarily because chords are a concept of Western music, and they simply are not an essential element when accompanying Indian bhajans. Whilst European music has, for centuries, focused on the development of polyphony and harmony within a few dominant scales, the millennia-old tradition of Indian music has systematically explored the wide variety of scales and perfected the structural elements of melody (rāga) and rhythm (tāla). Chords, in the sense of layers of major and minor thirds, play no part here.

Bhagavan Sri Sathya Sai Baba has made it clear to us that singing bhajans is about directing the mind towards God in all His forms and names. Whether this singing is accompanied by drums, cymbals, harmoniums or shruti boxes is secondary. Singing and clapping are sufficient on the level of music. The intention to connect with God is what matters. Accordingly, in old audio sources and still in the actual daily practice of the students, we find that chords are used selectively. This raises the question of why we should use chords after all.

As you can guess, there are some reasons that we found valuable. On the one hand, we continue to hear lots of inspiring examples in our musical sources and also in the practice of other spiritual traditions. Many bhajans can indeed be harmonised convincingly with Western chords, and we guess that some of them have even been composed with chords in mind. On the other hand, we were long aware that chordal accompaniment - for example, with guitars and keyboards - is a common practice in many Sai groups around the globe. To some extent, we were no exception.

The conclusion is therefore: Whilst harmonies are not a necessity when singing bhajans, they can nevertheless support the devotional feeling (bhāva) and uplift the spiritual energy of the group. And finally, we are also keen to bring together the beauty of the musical cultures from East and West - a beauty that we find universal in many ways.

With these harmonisations for Volume III (and with further planned chord publications), we are primarily fulfilling our own wish to enrich our bhajan practice with chords. With their publication, however, it is our hope that other groups can also take benefits from this.

So, my heartfelt thanks go firstly to Bro Reto, our yearlong musical and spiritual companion, webmaster and editor of Volume III, who took on the work of entering the handwritten chords into the existing digital scores. His tireless and meticulous work is admirable, and working with him a continuous pleasure. Next, many thanks to Stefanie and Martin Lienhard, who have hosted our monthly bhajans training for thirty years, and to all the attendees for their openness to enter different musical styles and be part of this experiment. Thus, it is with gratitude that we dedicate our efforts to Swami, our Master and Teacher, Bhagavan Sri Sathya Sai Baba.

We wish everyone much joy and love with these songs and chords! - Roger Dietrich, August 2026

Introduction

Types of accompaniments and harmonization of bhajans

The 81 bhajans in this collection are composed in 24 different scales. A large group of these scales (rāgas) or modes (thāts) either correspond to the Western major or minor scales (bilāval, āsāvarī) or are closely related to them (e.g. khammāj, kāfi, bhūpālī, hamsadhvani, nāt bhairav). Bhajans in these rāgas / thāts lend themselves well to harmonisation. Other scales are more distant, have different interval structures and can therefore only be harmonised to a limited extent. This applies to songs in rāgas such as bhairavī, toḍī, hemāvātī. In kalyāṇ it affects a main degree (augmented fourth) and often leads to the misinterpretation of the fifth as the tonic, thus distorting the rāga.

As a general rule, we can say that the closer the relationship to the Western major and minor scales and their primary degrees (I - II/IV - V), the more coherent, simpler and more intuitive the harmonisation. The greater the deviations - the more minor and augmented seconds a rāga contains - the more challenging and, indeed, impossible a chordal accompaniment becomes.

In practical terms, in this edition we find two categories of songs:

1. Bhajans that resist harmonisation, or where harmonisation, in our view, would distort the character and mood of the rāga too much, are marked with an initial N.C. (no chords). Here, we refrain from harmonisation in the Western sense. On a keyboard, the harmonium or the guitar, we can limit ourselves to playing the melody and, at most, the root note as well, embellishing and varying them within the tonal material of the rāga, in line with the common practice of experienced harmonium players.
2. Bhajans where chordal accompaniment is possible and where this might enhance the mood of the rāga, are marked with chords. We distinguish between two sub-categories:

- a. Songs with chords over a sustained bass note (pedal), marked with an initial ‘C ped.’

Here, the indicated chords should be played throughout over the pedal note C (on keyboard instruments, with the left hand). In doing so, we remain close to one concept of classical Indian music, in which accompanying instruments such as the tambura or shruti box sustain the fundamental tones (mostly Sa and Pa) continuously. The use of chords over drone or pedal notes is a typical part of Western musical tradition, both in classical and popular genres.

- b. Songs with chords over changing bass lines, with normal chord symbols

The use of moving bass notes is not common in the Indian tradition but is standard in Western music. These accompaniments consequently give the bhajans a more Western sound, closer to musical styles such as classical, pop or jazz.

In both cases, changes in the mood of the rāga (bhāva) are possible and are accepted to a certain, tolerable extent.

Playing the chords on different instruments

In this edition, we stick to our practice. All the songs and chords are notated in the key of C. We have in mind and suggest that you use a transposing keyboard or a scale-changer harmonium. Thus, the chords can be played as written in C and adapted to the lead singer’s vocal range.

When playing the harmonium, it is important to note that the bhajans with changing bass lines (2.a) can hardly be played with one hand. However, the suggested chords will mostly sound good. For bhajans with a sustained pedal note (2.b), the bass note C can either be played with the thumb on the keyboard depending on the melody’s progression or produced using the harmonium’s drone notes. However, these are often too quiet in relation to the rest of the music. Also keep in mind that they have to be adjusted correctly, in line with the transposition. The melody, bass and chord parts can also be divided amongst several players (sitar, harmonium, guitar, keyboard, bass).

On the guitar, while the key of C is easy to play, C minor is more of a challenge for amateur players. Transposing using a capo only works upwards and will not always produce satisfactory results. For this reason, transposing into a guitar-friendly key will often be worthwhile. An open tuning is particularly suitable for C-pedal accompaniments, as the lower strings take on the pedal notes.

One melody - several ways of harmonising

It may be that when harmonising, there is sometimes only one coherent option. More often, however, there are various options to choose from. In the original source of Bhajan No. 285 (Lambodara He Vināyaka), for example, we sometimes hear several harmonic versions of a single line - an unmistakable sign that the keyboardist improvised spontaneously during the recording. Although some may sound more convincing, all of his versions sound good and inspiring.

Similarly, the chords published here reflect only my personal choice, my favourite chords for one line, today, and my way of accompanying. In some cases, I took the original song far into western style. In others, I preferred to stay close to traditional Indian practice. My chords and choices are mere suggestions. They do not represent a sole correct or definitive form. Sometimes they are based on the transcription source, but more often than not, they are not. So, take these sheets as a base and do not let them stop you from making your own choices and developing your own version.

List of chord symbols

There are different ways and symbols of referring to chords, here is what we use, all examples in C:

symbol	name / explanation	notes
C	major triad	c e g (c d e g)
Csus	chord with suspended fourth	c f g
C7sus	seventh chord with suspended fourth	c f g b ^b (d)
C5	chord without a third, just the root and fifth	c g
Cmaj7	major triad with a major seventh	c e g b
C/E	major triad over e in the bass	^{low} e c (e) g
Cm	minor triad	c e ^b g
Cm7	minor triad with a minor seventh	c e ^b g b ^b
Cm7 ^b 5	diminished triad with a minor seventh	c e ^b g ^b b ^b
Cdim7	diminished triad with a diminished seventh (three minor thirds)	c e ^b g ^b a (b ^{bb})
C ped.	all chords are to be played with c in the bass
N.C.	no chords, use only the melodic material of the rāga

The musical score is written on five staves in a melodic minor scale (F major / D minor). The first staff begins with a treble clef, a key signature of one flat (Bb), and a common time signature (C). The melody is composed of eighth and quarter notes, with some phrases spanning across bar lines. The lyrics are written below the notes, with hyphens indicating syllables that span multiple notes. The second staff starts with a repeat sign (double bar line with two dots). The third staff continues the melody. The fourth staff also begins with a repeat sign. The fifth staff features a quintuplet (a group of five notes beamed together with a '5' above it) and ends with a repeat sign. The lyrics are: Ā - di Pūj - ya De - va Ga - jā - na - na, Gau - rī - va - ra Ta - na - ya Śu - bhā - na - na, Ā - di Pūj - ya De - va Ga - jā - na - na, Vigh - na Vi - nā - śa - ka Sid - dhi Vi - nā - ya - ka, Ja - ya Ja - ga - van - da - na Ta - va Ca - ra - ṇam.

The musical score is written in a single system with five staves. Each staff begins with a treble clef, a key signature of one flat (Bb), and a common time signature (C). The notes are written in a simple, accessible style, with many notes beamed together in groups of four or six. The lyrics are written below the notes, with hyphens indicating long notes. Chord symbols (Cm, F, G) are placed above the staves at various points. The score ends with a double bar line and repeat dots.

The musical score is written on seven staves of music. Each staff begins with a treble clef and a common time signature (C). The notes are primarily quarter and eighth notes, often beamed together. Chord symbols (C, G, F) are placed above the staves at various points. The lyrics are written below the notes, with some words connected by hyphens to indicate long notes or specific phrasing. The score ends with a double bar line on the final staff.

The musical score is written in 8/8 time with a key signature of three flats (Bb, Eb, Ab). It consists of six systems of music, each with a vocal line and a corresponding Sanskrit lyric line. The lyrics are: Sā - ī Rām, Sā - ī Śyām, Me - re Sā - ī Rām, Me-re Sā - ī, Me-re Bā - bā, Me-re Prā - ṇa Nā - tha Rām, Te-re Dvā - ra Pe Maĩ Ā - ūn Mu-jhe Śān - ti Do Bha-ga - vān, Mu - jhe Śān - ti Do Bha - ga - vān, Me - re Jī - va-na Mē Sā - tha Ra-ho Sā - ī Nā - tha He. The score includes various musical notations such as treble clef, key signature, time signature, and notes with stems and beams. Chord symbols (Cm, Bb, Fm, Gm, Ab) are placed above the notes. A '4' in a box indicates a quadruple measure. The word 'slow only' is written above the third system. The score ends with a double bar line and repeat dots.
